

WHO WAS BLACK BART?

Black Bart, a taciturn road agent, achieved legendary renown because of his many successful stagecoach robberies and the bad poetry he left behind. When he stopped a stage, Bart invariably used just four words to tell the driver what he wanted: "Throw down the box!"

In the years between 1875 and 1883, twenty-eight drivers ultimately did throw down their express boxes for Black Bart, and after nearly every robbery he left behind a taunting verse signed "Black Bart, the PO-8"...

"So here I've stood while wind and rain
Have set the trees a sobbin,
And risked my life for the damned stage
That wasn't worth the robbin!"

Bart never wounded nor killed anyone, never took a lady's purse, and always used an unloaded shotgun for the holdup. He was eventually apprehended and sent to San Quentin. He served a five year sentence, after which he disappeared forever.

Or Did He?

SOUVENIRS AVAILABLE

Ask your server about our selection of T-Shirts, Mugs, Glasses, and Hat Pins!
All can be added to your bill or purchased at the Host stand.

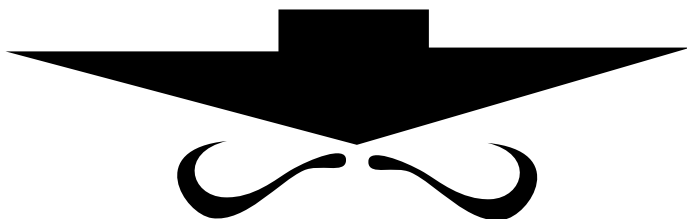

BART'S BANQUETS

We can accommodate up to 300 people at a discounted rate.
Call for prices and availability. Minimum 20 people please.

GIFT CERTIFICATES

Available in any amount, ask your server to purchase one.

BLACK BARBS

Steakhouse, Saloon & Musical Revue

